MAN SENTENCED TO MORE THAN 100 YEARS IN PRISON

A man convicted at trial of a brutal kidnapping and rape has been sentenced to more than 100 years in prison for a brutal rape and kidnapping.

David Preston (dob: 12-06-84) was found guilty of kidnapping, sexual assault with a weapon and robbery in a trial last August and was sentenced to an indeterminate to life sentence with a minimum 112 year prison term. Judge Anne Mansfield said this was the worst case she had ever seen as she sentenced Preston in Denver District Court earlier today.

In August 2007, Preston abducted a young woman from a parking garage near Cedar and Monaco. He sexually assaulted her at gunpoint in the parking garage, drove her to a park across the street and sexually assaulted her again before driving her to an ATM and forcing her to withdraw money.

Preston was identified through DNA and was taken into custody two days later. His DNA matched a sample that he had previously provided in an unrelated police investigation into a sexual assault that had occurred in 2004.
