WOMAN PLEADS GUILTY IN FATAL BUS CRASH

A bus driver charged in connection with a fatal crash that took place last spring at the intersection of Eighth Avenue and Lincoln Street in downtown Denver has pleaded guilty today.

Tidneykiyalesh Hawariyat (dob: 03-29-80) pleaded guilty to two counts of careless driving resulting in death (M) and one count of careless driving resulting in injury (M) naming each of the eleven victims.

On April 3, 2010, Hawariyat, a driver for Veolia Transportation, a private transit provider for RTD, failed to stop at a red light at Eighth Avenue and Lincoln Street, colliding with two vehicles. Two people were killed, ten passengers on the bus were injured, and one passenger in a second vehicle was injured.

Hawariyat is scheduled to be sentenced on January 6, 2011, at 1:30 p.m. in Denver County Courtroom 3B. Under the terms of the guilty plea agreement, she faces three years of probation, with additional conditions when she is sentenced.
